Update on the Industrial Action being taken by one of the large teaching unions:

We are aware there are staff members in the school who are eligible to take strike action next Wednesday. We can confirm that our school will be fully open to all pupils on Wednesday 1st February, which is the first proposed day of action. Children are to come to school as normal. If your child were to be absent on this day, then as usual, you would need to notify us as to the specific circumstances of their absence.

Years one and two had a lovely morning on Monday warming themselves by the firepit, drinking hot chocolate, while being immersed in poetry. They listened carefully and were able to tell if the poems contained onomatopoeia or alliteration. The children had great conversations, discussing what they could see, hear, and smell. They came up with some amazing rich vocabulary describing the fire; roaring, raging, snapping, crackling, blazing, and popping, to use in their own writing.

One of our favourite poems the children shared this week:

What Am I? (Riddle)

*I have no colour
Not even white,
But sometimes I'm wide and blue.
Sometimes I'm still,
And sometimes I rush,
And I can fall down on you.*

*I can change my shape,
I often do,
But I'm hard to hold in your hand.
You need me to make
Your castle stand up
When you are playing in the sand.*

*I haven't much taste
But on a hot day
Your tongue's hanging out for me.
Then I am cold,
But I can be hot
When I'm in your mum's cup of tea.*
